TINKERING TRAILERS

Tag along trailers are great for a weekend away, but the trailers restored by Tinker Tin Trailer Co. are versatile far beyond traditional use. Founder Jaime Holm of San Luis Obispo, California, rents her unique trailers out for special events and photo shoots, as well as the usual lodging on the road. Read on to learn how she got her start and tips to make the most of going RVing, and check out full inventory, trailer tidbits and events at tinkertin.com.

Barrel Horse News: How did you come up with the idea for your company?
Jaime Holm: Tinker Tin Trailer Co. was born after living in a trailer three different times after high school: in Santa Barbara, California; in Australia and in Pismo Beach, California. I wanted to share my experience with others. I love American history and old things, as well as life on the road. Once I lived in the trailer the first time, I fell in love with the simplicity of trailer life, having everything you need right there with you, not needing a lot of belongings and instead creating memories. The combination of the old trailers, their history and preserving them and my love of traveling and life on the road was something I wanted to share with everyone. Thus, a few years later I started Tinker Tin.

BHN: Tell me about one of your favorite trailers?
JH: We have a fleet of over 30 vintage trailers so it's hard to choose! My most favorite one of all though is probably our 1954 Kompak boat trailer. Only a few of these were manufactured. The trailer is all fiberglass, and the roof of the trailer is a boat. The boat comes off the top and you can fish out of it, the rear end of the trailer is the kitchen, and you sleep in the belly of the trailer. And if the boat is off the roof, then you can sleep staring up at the stars. It is really unique and fun!

BHN: Why are your trailers a good idea for events?
JH: Our trailers are unique statement pieces for any event and they can be set up anywhere: in the middle of a field, inside a barn, you name it. Besides the campers, we have vintage trailer photo booths, vintage bar trailers, vintage vending trailers for people to rent to sell their goods out of, and other trailers we have converted into mobile offices, a cigar lounge, places to get ready, touch up makeup and more.

BHN: Favorite spot to park your trailers?
JH: Our favorite places to park the trailers are really anywhere that is private, scenic and quiet. The trailers don't have modern amenities like a new RV does: no TV, no internet, no generators buzzing, et cetera. We love taking them up to the mountains, because they keep you out of the wind and elements at higher altitude campgrounds, and since they don't have any modern amenities there are no distractions from your camping trip. The trailers really allow you to slow down a bit, enjoy nature, appreciate the history and craftsmanship of the old trailers, play a card game, have a good ol' fashioned conversation around the campfire and more. It is a perfect blend for anyone who doesn't like tent camping, but wants a break from our fast-paced lives these days.

BHN: Tips for someone wanting to use a trailer for travel?
JH: Most everyone reading this hauls trailers pretty regularly, and probably has their own routine before they hit the road. The vintage trailers are a little bit different since they are single axle. They are a bit more squirrely than a normal horse trailer, which can be a little nerve-racking in high winds, so I just say take it slow. Also, if you get into a bind out on the road, normal tire or RV shops typically don't have parts to fix a vintage trailer. So, our biggest tip is to come self-contained with spare tires and any extra parts you think you will need.

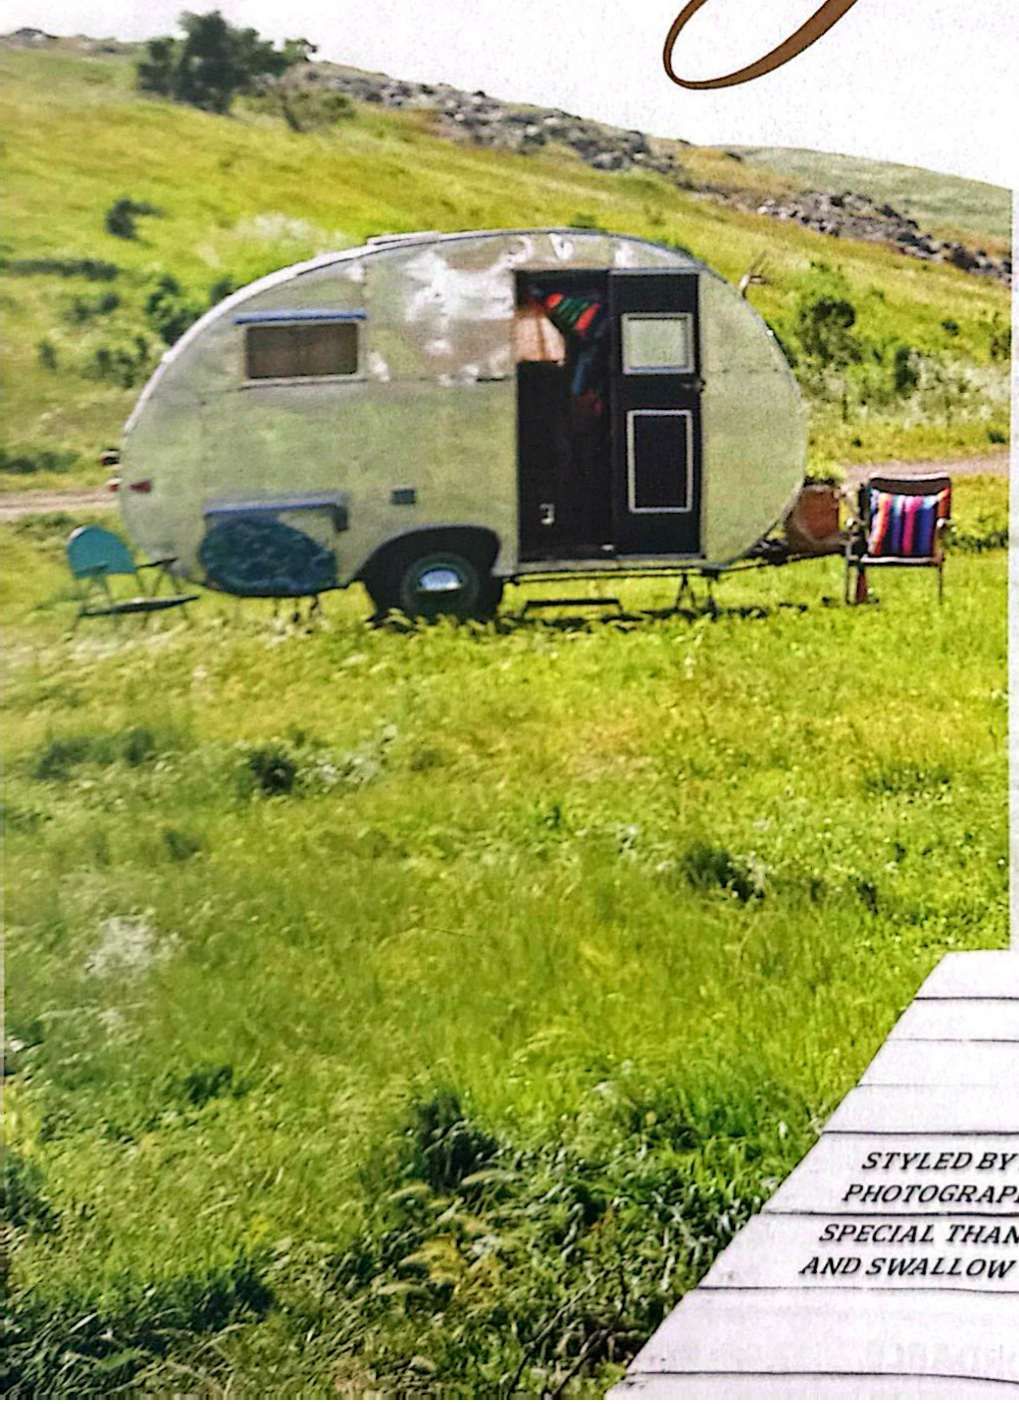
Denim and Glitter

A glam camping trip "Western Style"



Barrel Horse News is glamming and camping, or rather "glamping," this fa with airstream trailers, teepees and sequins. We find ourselves near Morro Bay, California, with a talented group of California high school and college rodeo stars donning the latest looks in Western fashion. This fall, enjoy enticing denim pieces from Wrangler, Rock&Roll Cowgirl, Cruel Denim, Cowgirl Tuff and Kimes Ranch. Pair them with some sparkle, a punchy pair of boots and hit the trail. We are firm believers that traveling in style is OK whether you're taking a weekend coastal camping trip on the beach, or traveling down the rodeo road!
